Chapter 1 by Dovalord

Kerc shifted in his seat as he steered his mech "Iron Steed" down the derelict street. The constant whirring of servos and the quiet thumping of his mech's feet kept him company. He rotated the cabin, hoping to see any signs of enemy activity. Suddenly, a rocket zoomed straight towards him. Kerc cursed under his breath, and maneuvered to dodge. As he swept to the side, the assailant came into view. It was another mech, outfitted with a rocket launcher. Kerc armed his guns, switching off the safety, and charged straight at him.

Chapter 2 by LethalPianist

However, in his earnest charge towards the enemy mech, Kerc neglected to step over the cars beneath his feet, and instead tripped over them.

His mech crashed into the enemy mech, which in turn crashed into the ground. Inside the cabin, red lights flashed as a robotic, female voice started intoning, "Sustained irreparable damage. Initiating pilot ejection and Nuclear Core Meltdown."

With a BANG Kerc was shot out of the cock pit and cannoned into the air. As he started falling a parachute bloomed from the back of his pilot seat. Down below him his mech exploded with a blinding flash.

"Not again..." Kerc sighed.

Chapter 3 by Alexs lilscas

As the enemy mech slowly got up he thought of what he had at his disposal to avoid almost certain death. So in the heat of the moment he realized he had sticky grenades with fusion cores and EMP bursts and as he took them out and readied his throw he heard the exhaust of yet another mech. The trouble was that Kerc could not see this one so he aimed at the mech that was in his view and as the mech was not on its two legs he had a direct landing with the grenade on the cockpit. Whoever was in the mech knew they're was no avoiding this so the mech just seemed to shut down and after a few seconds the mech was nothing but a pile of scrap. So Kerc finally was on the ground and as he heard the footsteps of the other mech he needed to plan what his next move was so he used his thruster pack to push himself further down Dereilect Street, his plan was to make it to Rontak city where he stored his second mech known as "The Bullet" because of its ability to throw punches almost as fast as bullets. As he got further and further away from the sounds he knew he was in the clear and for that small second he wasn't paying attention something struck him in the face and just like that Kerc was incapacitated.

Chapter 4 by Alan markel

When Kerc woke up, he couldn't see anything. Upon moving his head a little, he concluded that it was a bag over his head. He tried to move his hands and feet, but they were bound to whatever he was sitting in. Then, he heard a door open and close next to him. Footsteps approached from the right, and circled around to in front of him. He heard a voice, but it was distorted, as if through water, but it was vaguely feminine. "Kerc, you have killed one of my best pilots. Your'e lucky all I did was put a stun round in your face." "Who are you, how do you know my name?" said Kerc. "My name is not important, and neither is where you are," replied the person. With a flash of light, the bag was taken off of Kercs' head. And he saw, nothing. It was an empty room. He hear the voice again. "I am not here, but I will be soon. Pray that I decide too keep you alive for what you have done."

Chapter 5 by Phantim

Then he felt a sharp pain on the back of his head... then nothing.

Looking around he saw he was in an old abandoned building. Well, almost all the buildings were abandoned now... he sighed. Surprised he was still alive, he reached down to grab his radio and call for evac. Upon reaching down and feeling nothing but his leg, his bare leg. Soon he realized he was stark naked, it must have been one of the local survivors here. Likely he had been stripped for supplies and clothing.

"GOD DAMMIT!" he cursed. "This is just my luck..." he lamented. Even worse he didn't have his anti-radiation pills with him. If he didn't make it back to base in a few days, his body would slowly start to fall apart.

Knowing time was of the essence, he stood up, smacked the sand off his ass, and began walking.

Chapter 6 by GeneralSh

He quickly found an abandoned apartment complex, but the door was barred. Not after he threw himself through it, however. The door gave way like a pile of tissue paper. He found some clothes, but they didn't fit so well. Better than nothing. He heard loud footsteps.

Kerc looked outside, and his heart sunk to his balls. This is bad.

He's looking at a D3A-T4 Model mech. These things were made to hunt. To kill. Their extended lifespan and devastating firepower is unmatched. He saw the name on the identification plate. "Sin Reaper"

Grabbing a piece of wood, he used a sheared piece of metal to craft a crude spear. If he'll die, He'll die fighting.

He feels so pathetic right now.

Walking outside, he somehow managed to evade the searchlights by jumping from cover to cover, covering himself with radioactive sand. He has a few minutes, tops. He can already feel the tingling pain. Too long, too long. He reached the back leg of the tri-legged machine, and started climbing. The one fault about mechs is that they have no protection underneath. He found an access panel and opened it forcefully. The pilot, realizing something was up, but before he could initiate self-destruct and eject, Kerc reached in and pulled the wooden panel. After a half hour, Kerc was wearing the mech. Not bad. He took some Anti-rad pills, and piloted the mech.

Chapter 7 by Phantim

Unfortunately he wasn't thinking about how enemy auto-pilot worked. He awoke to the heavy grating noise as the large mechanical doors opened. He had just entered Ачинск the enemy strong hold. This was the heart of enemy operations, ten-thousand soldiers, and hundreds of enemy mechs would be waiting inside. For the first time in years, Captain Kerc was scared. Should he try to turn around, would it be too obvious? Should he try to attack the base and go out in a blaze of glory? Park the mech and try to sneak out on foot in the shadows? He didn't know what to do. He had never been an especially smart man, he followed the general's orders without question. He was loyal and brave, but now more than ever he needed to be clever. Then there was talking on his stolen mechs intercom.

"I told you I would be back for you," the familiar voice from earlier said.

Kerc never thought he would be happy to hear that voice, but he was glad if anything, to not be alone.

"Look, I don't know who you are, but please, help me," Kerc almost sighed into the comms.

Chapter 8 by Captain

"Meet me at..." the voice never finished, cut off by a loud shot.

"Are you still there," Asked Kerc, getting frantic, this person, or whatever it was was his only means of escape, his only hope.

The voice never responded, and the radio went static, he was alone. He moved his Steed inwards, deeper into the enemy's base.

He loaded his mech without anyone questioning him and he walked over in his mech towards the main reactor. Kerc could feel the energy pulses coming from the massive power source, the blue streaks going around and around making the base function. Kerc looked around to see if anyone was watching and he put 10 grenades with 60 minute timers on the reactor.

He controlled his mech and walked away, but a voice stopped him.

rushed to the scene, their f6 guns springing high energy volts at Kerc's mech, they just glanced off and he smiled, he was gonna blow the whole place up.

He ran towards the exit, blowing anything that he could up, a line of mechs were behind him and he turned his around, running backwards, blowing them to smithereens. He just sprang through the exit when the first explosion happened. Then another happened, and then another, he was well away when the base blew up the explosion sent his mech sprawling to the ground and he looked up at the chaos, it was hell itself.
